

H&R Block Announces Refund Advance of Up to $3,000

December 7, 2017

No-interest loan with no loan fees should provide relief for millions impacted by second year of government-mandated refund delay

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 07, 2017 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Starting January 5, H&R Block (NYSE:HRB) will make available a Refund Advance* of up to $3,000 from BofI Federal Bank to current and new clients. The Refund Advance, a no-interest loan offered for a limited time at participating offices, is repaid from the client's federal or state income tax refunds. If approved, clients will typically have access to money the same day they apply.

"The tax refund is the single largest financial transaction that many taxpayers have throughout the year. But the IRS can take up to 21 days to issue refunds. In some cases, taxpayers won't see their federal refunds in bank accounts until February 27," said Kathy Collins, H&R Block chief marketing and strategy officer. "The Refund Advance available at H&R Block gives qualifying clients money sooner – up to $3,000 on the day they file. Now, taxpayers can learn earlier if they prequalify to apply for the Refund Advance."

In addition to making appointments, taxpayers can experience the Refund Advance prequalification process online. The process compares the taxpayer's information, including last year's tax situation, to the lender's eligibility criteria, to see if the taxpayer would be eligible to apply for the loan. While the Refund Advance prequalification process is not guaranteed, for example, if there has been a significant change from last year's tax situation, it is a tool to provide taxpayers with more information prior to filing their taxes.

"We help taxpayers win every day when it comes to their income tax return," said Collins. "The no-interest, no loan fee Refund Advance is an example of providing clients an exceptional value above and beyond tax preparation."

Millions of taxpayers face refund delays

The Protecting Americans from Tax Hikes \(PATH\) Act, which was passed to help combat tax refund fraud, requires the IRS to hold refunds of taxpayers claiming the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) or the Additional Child Tax Credit (ACTC) who file early. Last year, roughly 15 million taxpayers claiming the EITC or ACTC had to wait until the week of Feb. 27 to get their refund from the IRS.

"For these clients and millions of others who desire access to money faster than the IRS can provide tax refunds, this loan can provide a valuable lifeline to cover planned and unforeseen expenses," Collins said.
