

H&R Block announces Refund Advance loan of up to $3,000

December 11, 2018

No-interest loan with no loan fees could provide relief from government-mandated tax refund delay

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 11, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Starting Jan. 4, consumers can apply at H&R Block (NYSE: HRB) for a Refund Advance Loan* of up to $3,000. The Refund Advance, a no-interest loan from Axos Bank™, offered Jan. 4 to Feb. 28 at participating offices, is repaid from the client's federal or state income tax refunds. If approved, clients will typically have access to money within hours of applying.

"At H&R Block, we believe you shouldn't need to wait, or pay loan fees or interest, to get access to money faster than your tax refund will arrive. That's why with the Refund Advance available at H&R Block, you could get money the day you file," said Vinoo Vijay, chief marketing officer at H&R Block.

Millions of consumers face refund delays

The Protecting Americans from Tax Hikes \(PATH\) Act, which was passed to help combat tax refund fraud, requires the IRS to hold refunds of taxpayers claiming the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) or the Additional Child Tax Credit (ACTC) until mid-February. Last year, roughly 15 million taxpayers claiming the EITC or ACTC had to wait until the week of Feb. 27 to get their refund from the IRS.

"We've listened to our clients, many of whom rely on their refunds early in the year, and will continue to offer them this no-interest Refund Advance loan," said Vijay. "What's more, we're also offering our clients complete transparency: we don't charge you interest or loan fees for the Refund Advance. This is just one way we are more upfront and transparent than ever before. We're also providing tax prep prices before your tax professional starts your return."
