New client portal makes expat tax returns easier to file despite more complex situations

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 26, 2019 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Taxes are complicated, and when U.S. citizens need help filing their expat tax returns, H&R Block (NYSE: HRB) can help even if they are living in another country. The H&R Block Expat Tax Services team, which is based in the U.S., specializes in the complex U.S. tax filing needs of Americans living abroad. For many, this can be even more challenging than being stateside and preparing for the April 15 deadline.

"If you are a U.S. citizen and live outside the U.S., chances are you have to file a U.S. tax return, but it can be difficult to find an expert in U.S. taxes while abroad," said Jody Vanarsdale, general manager of H&R Block Expat Tax Services. "Our virtual tax preparation service gives you access to our highly-trained international tax experts – right at your fingertips no matter where you live."

Finding the right tax preparer is just one challenge facing expats at tax time. Another is ensuring they get a transparent filing experience, during which they know where they stand at all times.

"The feedback we've received from our clients is that they want to be guided through the filing process," said Scott Buchbinder, director of H&R Block Expat Tax Services. "This is why we launched our new client portal, a one-stop-shop for virtual tax prep that takes you through every step of the process all in one place."

At every step, the client is guided through the process by the client portal and has convenient access to H&R Block tax experts to make sure they get every eligible tax deduction. Additional benefits of the portal include a streamlined tax interview based on the client's personal situation and secure document management to help clients prepare and organize for tax preparation.

How it works – five easy steps to file expat taxes

The entire client experience takes place in the secure client portal and includes just five easy steps to complete an expat tax return:

1. Register an account and complete the tax organizer
2. Receive a price quote and get assigned to a tax advisor who fits the specific situation
3. Have the return prepared remotely by the assigned tax expert
