TORONTO and KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 15, 2022 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- After 12 years of leading Wave Financial Inc., the company's CEO Kirk Simpson is stepping down at the end of June. Simpson co-founded the company in 2009 with James Lochrie and has been serving as CEO since that time. The Toronto-based fintech provides all-in-one financial management solutions for small business owners, including industry-leading products like Wave Money. Wave was acquired by H&R Block (NYSE: HRB) in 2019.

"At Wave we recently achieved an important milestone -- $100 million CAD in annual revenue. That is a milestone that many entrepreneurs dream about but very few achieve," said Simpson. "I am an entrepreneur at my core, and this level of financial success for Wave was the moment I realized it was time to pass the reigns on to a new leader who will guide the company through its next phase of growth. We accomplished what I always hoped we would do -- build a business that lives and breathes to support small business owners in their very personal journey. Serving this community has been a gift. I feel grateful to all of the Wavers past and present who I got to work with through this amazing journey. I know the strong team at Wave today will continue to push to innovate on behalf of our amazing customers. I wish all Wavers continued success, and I'll be rooting for them as I look ahead to my next adventure."

Zahir Khoja Named Wave CEO

Zahir Khoja will become Wave's CEO effective July 1. Khoja most recently served as General Manager, North America at Afterpay, a leader in "Buy Now, Pay Later" payments where he led the rapid market expansion overseeing sales, client relationships, business growth, and partnerships. Khoja has significant fintech and financial services experience, serving in various leadership roles for nearly a decade at MasterCard, rising to Executive Vice President, Global Merchant Solutions and Partnerships. At Wave, Khoja will report to H&R Block President and CEO Jeff Jones, as a member of Block's Senior Leadership Team.

"I am excited to welcome Zahir as Wave's CEO and a member of my leadership team," said Jones. "After a thorough search for Kirk's replacement, we were thrilled when we met Zahir who has an entrepreneurial spirit, is a leader in the fintech industry, and is ready to guide Wave's future success."

Simpson will remain in an advisory role for 90-days through September. In addition, the current Wave leadership team, including Chief Operating Officer Paul Marshall, Chief Financial Officer Tam Khuu, Chief Financial Services Officer Les Whiting, Chief Technology Officer Geoff Vona, and Chief People Officer Ashira Gobrin will remain in their current roles reporting to Khoja.

"I am ecstatic to lead the next chapter of Wave's success," said Khoja. "The company provides valuable services to small business owners. The pandemic showed us that small businesses are crucial to the health of the economy and our local communities. They are a group worth fighting for and more and more of them need the financial management tools that Wave provides."
