Says Breeden Partners Offers No New Ideas and Only A Disruption of Momentum

KANSAS CITY, Mo. August, 2, 2007 -- H&R Block Inc. (NYSE: HRB) announced today that it is urging all shareholders to protect their investment by voting for the Company's director nominees. In a letter to shareholders, the Company warns that "Breeden Partners' nominees, should they join our Board, create a grave risk of impairing the independence of your Company's auditor." The Company further points out that "If your Company is forced to change auditors next month due to Mr. Breeden's outside activities, such a change would be costly, disruptive and inconsistent with good practice." More information on this matter is available under Item 2 of the proxy statement H&R Block filed on July 30, 2007.

The full text of the letter follows:

Dear Fellow Shareholder:

Over the past year, we have strengthened our focus on our core tax, accounting and related financial services businesses. In addition, we have fueled the growth of our Tax Services business through the creation of H&R Block Bank and are confident that the Bank will enhance our ability to attract and retain early tax return filers, giving us a strong competitive advantage. We believe our shareholders can look to a bright future for H&R Block as a result of these steps taken under the leadership of your Board of Directors.

Given our positive momentum, it is unfortunate that Mr. Richard Breeden, through his hedge fund Breeden Partners, is seeking to have himself and two of his associates elected to our Company's Board of Directors without having put forth any new or constructive ideas or a plan to improve value for shareholders.

In fact, Breeden Partners' nominees pose a significant disruption to our progress and our strategic plan. Consider the following: Mr. Breeden, a former regulator turned hedge fund manager, is the government-appointed Monitor for KPMG, your Company's independent auditor - a fact which he inexplicably failed to disclose in his initial filing with the SEC. Breeden Partners' nominees, should they join our Board, create a grave risk of impairing the independence of your Company's auditor.

If your Company is forced to change auditors next month due to Mr. Breeden's outside activities, such a change would be costly, disruptive and inconsistent with good practice. Because the forced change would occur abruptly with virtually no transition period, it would divert a significant amount of management and Board time and attention away from executing the Company's strategic plan and delivering shareholder value.

It is surprising that Mr. Breeden, with his SEC and corporate governance background, would be so dismissive of the auditor independence issues created by his actions and the disruption to the Company that would follow from the loss of KPMG. ASK YOURSELF WHOSE INTERESTS MR. BREEDEN HAS IN MIND-- YOURS OR HIS OWN?

By continuing to execute the Company's strategic plan, I believe that we are on track to deliver superior value for all H&R Block shareholders. This is not the time for costly distractions and disruption.

The annual meeting of shareholders is just four weeks away. I urge you to vote FOR the Company's highly qualified, dedicated director nominees TODAY -- by telephone, by Internet, or by signing, dating and returning the WHITE proxy card in the postage-paid envelope provided.

Thank you for your continued support,

Mark Ernst

Chairman, President and CEO
